Manwatching

A funny and frank insight into female desire read out loud by an unprepared man!

SAINT JOHN – The Saint John Theatre Company is proud to present the London based Royal Court Theatre production of Manwatching. Audiences can expect some frank and funny entertainment performed by some local celebrities. Manwatching is part of the SJTC Studio Series held at BMO Studio Theatre located at 112 Princess Street.

Manwatching is a monologue about female heterosexual desire. The sometimes explicit script is performed by a different male each night. The performer does not receive the script in advance and is therefore forced to read the script for the first time in front of an audience.

Local celebrities will play the role of the “unprepared man”. Manwatching will run from February 20-23 and will feature:

Clyde A. Wray – a man of many talents! Local writer, director, producer, author and performer with the unforgettable voice! Clyde A. Wray will perform on Wednesday, February 20th

James Mullinger – the British comedian that has taken Canada by storm appearing in sold out shows across the country and on several television shows and movies! The one and only James Mullinger will perform on Thursday, February 21st

Hance Colburne – professional storyteller, communicator and local radio legend, Hance Colburne has welcomed his way into our homes and hearts over the years as the beloved host of CBC Information Morning in Saint John. Hance continues to share more good stories about New Brunswickers in his new role at the Saint John Regional Hospital Foundation. Hance Colburne will perform on Friday, February 22nd

Scott Thomas – this local funny guy is no stranger to awkward situations! As founder of the The Improvisation Corporation and front man for hundreds of improv shows over the years, Scott has left many a room in stitches with his quirky humour, creative comedy and quick come-backs. Scott Thomas will perform on Saturday, February 23rd
