Don't miss the bus!

Tales of an Urban Indian; a unique and unforgettable story staged on a moving transit bus.

SAINT JOHN – The Saint John Theatre Company is proud to welcome Ontario based Talk Is Free Theatre with their powerful and engaging story Tales of an Urban Indian, part of the SJTC Studio Series.

Written by CBC's Darrell Dennis and starring Craig Lauzon of the Royal Canadian Air Farce, Tales of an Urban Indian is a dark comedy about the life of Simon Douglas, a contemporary First Nations man facing life on the reserve and on the streets of Vancouver, and the people who shape his journey.

The audience, along with the actor, will be passengers on a moving transit bus throughout the performance. The bus will work its way around the city streets as the story unfolds. This unique and intimate venue allows the audience to connect with the characters and fully absorb the story.

"Although the central character is going through one extreme situation after another, we have all been in that place from which we didn't think we would recover... This is a play about a journey and encounters... that stranger sitting next to us on the bus that might have a story to share," adds Arkady Spivak, Artistic Producer, Talk Is Free Theatre.

The show will run from April 3-7. Tickets are $32.50 and $20 for students. Evening performances begin at 7:30pm; in addition there will be two daytime matinees at 2pm on the Saturday and Sunday. The audience is to gather at 112 Princess Street in advance of the performance.

To secure your spot on the bus please visit www.ticketpro.ca or call 1-888-311-9090.

Funding for Tales of an Urban Indian has been provided by Canadian Heritage, BMO Financial, NB Children's Foundation, the Province of New Brunswick The McCain Foundation and TD.
