Star-studded cast takes centre stage.

SJTC presents Driving Miss Daisy next month with a small but mighty cast.

SAINT JOHN – The SJTC Main Stage Series at the Imperial Theatre continues with the heart-warming award winning play Driving Miss Daisy which will run at Imperial Theatre from March 25-28. The show will be directed by Stephen Tobias and will feature a small but mighty cast.

Walter Borden, an award winning actor, poet and playwright, will play the role of Hoke Colburn. Born in New Glasgow, Nova Scotia, Walter has performed on many stages across the country. He is also a founding member of the Nova Scotia Project, a premier Civil Rights organization in the country.

Acclaimed actor Jenny Munday will be playing the role of Miss Daisy. Jenny has performed from coast to coast. Jenny wears many hats in the arts community including playwright, dramaturge, arts administrator, mentor and coach.

Saint John Theatre Company veteran Vince Gregg will take on the role of Boolie Werthan. Vince is a long-time member of the SJTC and has been involved with many productions both on stage and behind the scenes.

Driving Miss Daisy is set in the midst of the Civil Rights Movement where an unlikely friendship develops between an elderly Jewish widow and her African American chauffeur. Driving Miss Daisy is a funny and warm-hearted story of friendship surmounting creed, colour and race.

Driving Miss Daisy, which will run from March 25-28 at Imperial Theatre. Adult tickets are $42.50, senior and matinee tickets are $35.50 and students are $10. To secure your seat contact the Imperial Theatre box office at 506-674-4100 or visit www.imperialonline.ca.

Support for Driving Miss Daisy has been provided by BMO Financial, Canaport LNG, Echelon Home Improvement and Repair, New System Laundry, Sussex Area Community Foundation, the Province of New Brunswick, and TD.
